THINGS TO KNOW

A D.C. student and Denver man were among the 290 killed.

Sri Lanka said on Monday it was invoking emergency powers in the aftermath of devastating bomb attacks on hotels and churches, blamed on militants with foreign links, which killed 290 people and wounded nearly 500.

The emergency law, which gives police and the military extensive powers to detain and interrogate suspects without court orders, would go into effect at midnight local time, the president's office said.

Colombo, the seaside capital of the Indian Ocean island, was jittery the day after the horrifying Easter Sunday attacks. Police said 87 bomb detonators were found at the city's main bus station, while an explosive went off near a church when bomb squad officials were trying to defuse it. Scores were killed in the church on Sunday.

A night curfew went into effect at 8 p.m.

There was no claim of responsibility for Sunday's attacks but suspicion was focusing on Islamist militants in the Buddhist-majority country.

Investigators said seven suicide bombers took part in the attacks, while a government spokesman said an international network was involved.

work was involved.

Police had received a tip-off of a possible attack on Colombo's seafloor, said Ariyananda Welianga, an official at the government's forensic division. The others targeted three churches and two other hotels.

A fourth hotel and a house in a suburb of the capital Colombo were also hit, but it was not immediately clear how those attacks were carried out. "Still the investigations are going on," Welianga said.

Police said 24 people had been arrested, all of whom were Sri Lankan, but they gave no more details. Most of the attacks came during Easter services and when hotel guests were sitting down for breakfast buffets.

Two of the suicide bombers blew themselves up at the Shangri-La Hotel on Colombo's seafloor, said Ariyananda Welianga, an official at the government's forensic division. The others targeted three churches and two other hotels.

A fourth hotel and a house in a suburb of the capital Colombo were also hit, but it was not immediately clear how those attacks were carried out.

"Still the investigations are going on," Welianga said.

Police said 24 people had been arrested, all of whom were Sri Lankan, but they gave no more details. Most of the attacks came during Easter services and when hotel guests were sitting down for breakfast buffets.

"Guests who had come for breakfast were lying on the floor, blood all over," an employee at Kingsbury Hotel told Reuters.

A fifth-grader among the Americans killed

A fifth-grade student at an exclusive private school in Washington, D.C., and a Denver man on a business trip were among the U.S. residents killed in the Sri Lanka Easter attacks, a media report and the man's employer said on Monday.

U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo said "several" Americans were killed without providing a precise number.

Kieran Shafritz de Zoya, a fifth-grader at Sidwell Friends, died in one of the blasts, the school emailed to friends and family, according to CNN. Fifth-graders are around 10 years old. Staff at the school did not respond to requests for confirmation.

"Passionate about learning, he adored his friends, and was incredibly excited about returning to Sidwell Friends in the coming school year," school principal Mamadou Gueye wrote in the email, CNN reported.

The boy's citizenship was unknown. Sidwell Friends is the school where President Barack Obama's daughters Sasha and Malia and President Bill Clinton's daughter Chelsea attended.

Dieter Kowalski, a Wisconsin native who lived in Denver, was also among the victims. He was on a business trip for the British education publishing company Pearson, which has 800 employees in Sri Lanka.

"Dieter had just arrived at his hotel, where many of our colleagues have stayed over the years, when he was killed in an explosion," Pearson CEO John Fallon said on LinkedIn.

All other Pearson employees in Sri Lanka have been accounted for, Scott Overland, a Pearson spokesman, wrote in an email.

A senior leader on a technical services team, Kowalski was on assignment to work with local Pearson engineering teams, Fallon said. "Colleagues who knew Dieter well talk about how much fun he was to be around, how big-hearted and full-spirited he was. They tell of a man to whom we could give our ugliest and most challenging of engineering problems, knowing full well that he would jump straight in and help us figure it out," Fallon said.

Kowalski himself appeared enthusiastic about his trip, posting a map on Facebook showing the path from Denver to Colombo.

"And the fun begins. Love these work trips. 24 hours of flying. See you soon Sri Lanka!" Kowalski said in his final Facebook post on Friday.

Trump sues to block Congress finance subpoena

2 President Donald Trump on Monday filed suit to keep U.S. lawmakers from obtaining his financial records, the first salvo in what promises to be an escalating legal battle with Democrats in Congress. The suit seeks to block a subpoena issued by the Democratic chairman of the U.S. House Oversight Committee for information about Trump's personal and business finances, alleging Democrats have launched "all-out political war" on

Trump with subpoenas as their "weapon of choice." Elijah Cummings, the House Oversight Committee chairman, issued the subpoena to the president's accountant after Trump's former lawyer, Michael Cohen, testified to Congress in February that Trump had misrepresented his net worth. "Chairman Cummings' subpoena is invalid and unenforceable because it has no legitimate legislative purpose," Trump's lawyers said in a filing. REUTERS

Samsung delays public rollout of Galaxy Fold

3 Samsung said on Monday it will delay the public rollout of its Galaxy Fold without giving a new release date. The announcement comes days after some reviewers of the splashy $1,980 foldable handset reported problems with their test units after just a day or two of use. Samsung postponed media events for the device planned for this week in Hong Kong and Shanghai. "To fully evaluate this feedback and run further internal tests, we have decided to delay the release of the Galaxy Fold," a Samsung rep said. Instead of plaudits ahead of the phone's previously planned launch on April 26 in the U.S., the South Korean conglomerate has been blighted by technology journalists reporting breaks, bulges and blinking screens, raising the specter of the combustible Galaxy Note 7 three years ago which the firm ultimately pulled from shelves at massive cost. Warren proposes canceling billions in student loan debt

4 U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for the 2020 presidential election, wants to cancel billions of dollars in student loan debt and make college cheaper for students going forward. Warren, in a post on the website Medium, proposed canceling $50,000 in student loan debt for anyone with an annual household income under $100,000, which her campaign said would amount to 42 million Americans. It would also cancel some debt for those with household incomes between $100,000 and $250,000. Warren, who has long advocated in Congress for providing debt relief to students, called student loan debt a "crisis." She said canceling debt for millions of people would help close the nation's racial and wealth gap, and also proposed making all two-year and four-year public colleges free. REUTERS

Moulton latest to throw hat into Democratic 2020 presidential race

The congressman and Iraq War vet is a gun-control advocate.

U.S. Rep. Seth Moulton entered the 2020 Democratic presidential race on Monday as a long-shot contender in a contest that now includes almost 20 candidates.

A 40-year-old Iraq War veteran who represents a district in Massachusetts, Moulton enters the race as an underdog, with little national name recognition and a shorter track record than some rivals who have spent years in the U.S. Senate or as state governors.

Moulton has built a political career by challenging the party's establishment. He entered Congress in 2015 after winning a Democratic primary challenge against John Tierney, who had held the seat for 18 years.

After Democrats took control of the U.S. House of Representatives in 2018, Moulton helped organize opposition to Nancy Pelosi's bid to again become Speaker of the House.

He ended his opposition to Pelosi with a statement saying: "Tough conversations make us stronger, not weaker, and we need to keep having them if we're going to deliver on the change that we've promised the American people."

In a YouTube video announcing his presidential candidacy, he said: "Decades of division and corruption have broken our democracy and robbed Americans of their voice."

"While our country marches forward, Washington is anchored in the past," he said.

In the video, Moulton said he wants to tackle climate change and grow the U.S. economy by promoting green jobs as well as high-tech and advanced manufacturing.

Moulton served in the Marines from 2001 to 2008. During his 2014 congressional bid, he became a vocal critic of the Iraq War in which he served, saying no more troops should be deployed to the country.

He has advocated stricter gun laws, saying military-style weapons should not be owned by civilians.

Moulton supports the legalization of marijuana and told Boston public radio station WGBH in 2016 that he had smoked pot while in college.

He graduated from Harvard University with an undergraduate degree in physics in 2001 and returned to receive a master's degree in business and public policy in 2011. REUTERS

Herman Cain withdraws from consideration for Federal seat

President Donald Trump said on Monday that businessman and former presidential candidate Herman Cain had withdrawn from consideration for a seat on the Federal Reserve Board.

Four Republican senators voiced opposition to Trump's expected nomination of Cain in recent weeks, likely enough to deny Cain the support he needed to secure Senate confirmation for the post.

Economists and critics have expressed concerns about loyalists of Trump serving on the traditionally nonpartisan central bank.

Cain has been a public advocate of many of Trump's policies, as has Stephen Moore, a fellow at the conservative Heritage Foundation think tank, whom Trump has also said he wants to nominate for one of two vacant seats on the seven-member Fed Board of Governors in Washington.

But Cain had vowed to fight on in several interviews, and had said he was under attack as a nominee because he is a conservative. Cain's bid for president in 2012 was derailed by accusations of sexual harassment that he has repeatedly denied.

Herman Cain.

REUTERS

"My friend Herman Cain, a truly wonderful man, has asked me not to nominate him for a seat on the Federal Reserve Board. I will respect his wishes. Herman is a great American who truly loves our Country!" Trump said in a Twitter post.

Cain did not immediately respond to a request for comment on Monday.

Central bank independence from short-term politics is seen as important to prevent influence that could lead to runaway debt, hyperinflation and financial instability.

Trump elevated Jerome Powell to Fed chairman a year ago but has frequently criticized him for the U.S. central bank's interest rate increases.

The central bank's other top policymakers head the Fed's 12 regional banks and are chosen by local boards of directors, not the U.S. president.

Cain, the former head of the Godfather's Pizza restaurant chain, had served as chairman of the Kansas City Fed's board in the mid-1990s in a role that also provides the regional bank with input on the local economy.

The Fed in March brought a three-year rate-hike cycle to an abrupt end as it abandoned projections for any further rate increases this year.

Celebrate World Book Day 2019!

Put down your phone and tablet for a couple hours to get lost in a new book.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

While yesterday was a day to celebrate and respect the planet where we reside, today marks a day of recognition for those worlds we create in our imaginations, otherwise known as World Book and Copyright Day.

Originally started in 1995 by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), World Book Day was founded to promote reading and the creativity behind each book's publication, as well as copyright.

Every year, World Book and Copyright Day falls on a pretty significant date in the history of literature, as William Shakespeare, Miguel Cervantes and Inca Garcilaso de la Vega all passed away on April 23. The importance of this date was resoundingly agreed upon at UNESCO's first General Conference in Paris in 1995, when they made the decision to recognize World Book Day as a way to pay tribute to books and their authors. The organization is emphatic in its support and describes books as the "most beautiful invention for sharing ideas beyond the boundaries of humanity, space and time, as well as the most powerful forces of poverty eradication and peace building."

"In these turbulent times, books embody the diversity of human ingenuity, giving shape to the wealth of human experience, expressing the search for meaning and expression we all share, that drive all societies forward," said Audrey Azoulay, director-general of UNESCO, in a release. "Books help weave humanity together as a single family, holding a past in common, a history and heritage, to craft a destiny that is shared, where all voices are heard in the great chorus of human aspiration."

Azoulay also outlined that the translation of books into different languages can help us to understand cultural differences and grow closer as members of the international community.

"Books are also a form of cultural expression that lives through a chosen language," Azoulay explained in the release. "Each publication is created in a separate language and is intended for a language-specific reading audience. A book is thus written, produced, exchanged, used and appreciated in a linguistic and cultural setting. This year, we highlight this important dimension because 2019 marks the International Year of the Indigenous Languages, led by UNESCO, to reaffirm the commitment of the inter-

The day is celebrated on the same date for every country recognized within the United Nations except for the U.K. and Ireland, which moved the official date to March and still recognize the 23rd with a charity event called World Book Night. Sweden also moved its national book day, back in 2000, to April 13.

While it is easy to lose yourself to convenience by endlessly scrolling on your phone or tablet, we should use this day to not take books for granted. Make sure to pop into your local library or bookstore on your commute to or from work and pick up something mysterious and exciting. It will help you to remember that there is no greater joy than getting lost in a new book.

Do or die tonight at Garden

It's another win-or-go-home scenario for the Bruins and Leafs tonight.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

You've got to go through hell before you get to hockey heaven, which is about the only thing the fan bases of the Bruins and Maple Leafs can agree on right about now.

When the Bruins broke their 39-year Stanley Cup drought in 2011, they had to take down a pair of teams in the playoffs that had haunted them in years prior. The 2011 B's swept the Flyers, a year after they had choked away a 3-0 series lead to the same team. That unforgettable 2011 group also took down the hated Canadiens in seven games en route to the Cup.

The Maple Leafs face an eerily similar situation tonight in Game 7 at the Garden (7 p.m., NESN). Toronto's Stanley Cup drought has now reached 50 years. The Leafs are also back in their house of recent horrors on Causeway Street this evening as they lost severely heart-breaking Game 7s here in 2013 and 2018.

Brad Marchand has been on-point in the series with nine points. GETTY IMAGES

So, maybe the Leafs are due. But just as likely is that the Bruins will continue their drama-filled dominance over Toronto.

Home is where the "L" is

Of course, you want to play any Game 7 at home, but in this quirky series the home team is just 2-4.

The only game the Bruins won at the Garden in this series was Game 2, a 4-1 victory on a Saturday night 10 days ago, and neither team has won back-to-back games in the series.

Trends are often broken in Game 7s, however, as the do-or-die nature of the game offers something of a clean slate. It's entirely possible that a few of the biggest no-shows in the series thus far get going tonight.

Consider that Patrice Bergeron hasn't scored since Game 2; David Pastrnak has been held scoreless in five of the six games so far; the Leafs' leading scorer in 2018-19, Mitch Marner, hasn't found the net since Game 1; and John Tavares hasn't scored since Game 1, either.

Walk the line

Bruce Cassidy is likely to stick with the same lineup tonight that he used in the victorious Game 6. Here are the pairings:

Marchand-Bergeron-Heinen

DeBrusk-Krejci-Pastrnak

Coyle-Johansson-Kuhlman

Nordstrom-Kuraly-Acciari

McAvoy-Chara

Carlo-Krug

Moore-Grzelcyk

Messy Garden

Brad Marchand can say anything he wants right about now as he has nine points in this series, including a pair of goals in Game 6 in Toronto on Sunday.

Marchand used his platform to blast the TD Garden playing surface, saying it's been a sloppy track since the series began.

"[Toronto] has played really well in our building so far this series," Marchand said. "The ice has been terrible there so, you know, might as well play with a tennis ball. We'll just skate around and see who bounces one in the net."

Tuukka time

Tuukka Rask has been very strong in this series, but tonight would be a swell time for a shutout. Rask's best game this series came in Game 2, when he allowed just one Leafs goal.

The Bruins defense has tightened up in the past two games as there were just 27 shots on goal in Game 5 and a series-low 24 shots on goal in Game 6.

Rask has a 2.50 goals-against average in the series, which is consistent with his regular-season GAA of 2.48.

Torey Krug says hello to Toronto's Zach Hyman in Game 5. GETTY IMAGES

Are you going places? Or looking for places to go?

Managing your benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH) alone may not be enough. If you are on BPH therapy and visiting the bathroom frequently, you may have an overactive bladder (OAB).

The immediate need to 'go' interrupts your day and night – and it may not be caused by your BPH.

- Do you have to use the bathroom at least 8 times a day?
- Do you still wake up 2 or more times each night to use the bathroom?
- Do you experience a need to use the bathroom immediately (urinary urgency)?

If these symptoms disrupt your day and night, you may also have a condition called OAB.

A clinical research study is testing the safety and effectiveness of an investigational drug in men on BPH therapy experiencing OAB symptoms. Over 1000 participants in over 135 study centers across North America and Europe are expected to take part in the COURAGE Study.
